The 6 Dimensions of the Fear of Harm (FOH) Phenotype

Territorial Aggression Has irritable mood states Is intolerant of delays Relentlessly pursues own needs and is demanding of others Is willful and refuses to be subordinated by others Argues with adults Is bossy towards others Defies or refuses to comply with rules Blames others for his/her mistakes Is easily angered in response to limit setting Lies to avoid consequences of his/her actions Has protracted, explosive temper tantrums Has difficulty maintaining friendships Displays aggressive behavior towards others	Self-Esteem Complains of being bored Experiences periods of self-doubt and poor self-esteem Feels easily criticized and/or rejected Feels easily humiliated or shamed
Harm to Self and Others Has destroyed property intentionally Curses viciously, uses foul language in anger Makes moderate threats to others or self Makes clear threats of violence to others or self Has made clear threats of suicide Is fascinated with gore, blood, or violent imagery	Psychosis/Parasomnias/Sweet Cravings/Obsessions (PPSO) Has acknowledged experiencing auditory and/or visual hallucinations Has night terrors and/or nightmares Wets bed Craves sweet-tasting foods Hoards or avidly seeks to collect objects or food Has concern with dirt, germs, or contamination
Anxiety Displays excessive distress when separated from family Exhibits excessive anxiety or worry	Sleep/Arousal/Thermoregulation Has difficulty arising in the AM Has difficulty settling at night Has difficulty getting to sleep Sleeps fitfully and/or awakens in the middle of the night

Dimensions are made up of symptoms that come together as clusters with each other to a greater frequency than they do with others, for the population of people included in the analysis.

Names are given to the dimensions based on what the cluster of symptoms suggests.